

Varieties of re-enchantment: nature and spirituality in contemporary societies

Dr. Joram Tarusarira

University of Groningen

When climate-related security risks meet religion and spirituality

Religion significantly influences how local communities in fragile contexts interpret and respond to climate crises. Based on ethnographic research in Nampula, Mozambique, my presentation critiques the dominance of technological approaches in climate action, highlighting how religion shapes responses and provides meaning, impacting vulnerability and adaptive capacity.

Thursday January 23, 2025

15:00 CET

Participation is free

